Tony Bennett

Frank Sinatra called Tony Bennett “the best singer in the business.” He is not just the singer’s singer, but an international treasure, honored by the United Nations with its Citizen of the World award. Bennett’s interpretation of musical style attracts new generations of fans and has inspired performers such as Michael Bublé and Harry Connick, Jr.

With worldwide record sales in the millions and dozens of platinum and gold albums to his credit, Bennett has received 15 Grammy Awards including the prestigious Grammy Lifetime Achievement Award. The MTV generation first embraced Bennett during his appearance with the Red Hot Chili Peppers on the 1993 MTV Video Awards. He appeared on MTV Unplugged and the resulting recording of the same name garnered him the top Grammy Award for Album of the Year. “Tony Bennett has not just bridged the generation gap,” observed The New York Times, “he has demolished it. He has solidly connected with a younger crowd weaned on rock. And there have been no compromises.” Bennett credits his eldest son and manager, Danny, for his success in capturing a whole new generation of listeners. His most recent CD release was the holiday recording, “Tony Bennett: A Swingin’ Christmas Featuring the Count Basie Orchestra,” that is destined to become a seasonal favorite. In 2009, he re-signed to Columbia Records, continuing his status as the artist signed for the greatest period of time in the label’s history.

Tony Bennett became a Kennedy Center Honoree in 2005 and was named an NEA Jazz Master in January of 2006 and was also named the recipient of Billboard magazine’s elite Century Award, in honor of his outstanding contributions to music.

As the world’s most boyish octogenarian, a vital musical artist at the peak of his powers, Tony Bennett is living proof that, to steal a line from Sinatra, fairy tales can come true if you’re young at heart.
